Healthy, happy children can be found in all cultures, religions and social classes. There are many successful ways to raise your children, and some of these ways differ a lot from one another or may even be contradictory.

Whatever culture, religion or parenting style children grown up in, there are universal orders that underlie them all. It is these orders that we will be uncovering in this course.

How is this course different?

- Rather than give you more parenting advice, this course aims to take parents through a journey to the hidden, systemic dynamics that often lie behind challenges faced in every day parenting
- It looks at the root causes and starts a process of connecting participants to what lies behind a lot of common parent-child issues
- There will be a mixture of teachings, exercises and self-exploration

Aim – to open up the family heart

- To connect participants to their family heart and give them an experiential experience of this
- Introduction to the orders of love as seen in family constellations related to parent-child dynamics
- Bring to light what is helpful and in support of the family heart (and what hinders it)

- This course is open to anyone who wishes to find out more about what opens up the family heart and supports the flow of love in family systems.
- Some people may have a specific situation that they would like to address, whereas others will want to just learn more about the systemic dynamics that lie behind parent-child relationship
